

The idea of the whole website is to make it visually as simple as possible but at the same time, providing as much information as possible, so most of my page designs are quite simple in terms of colors and numbers of elements shown at the same time.

The home page provides a salutation to all the visitors and provide enough information about the website itself and then lead them to the speaker selection page.

In the speaker selection page, people would choose one of the three speakers to view their personal profiles. The hyperlink button to each speaker is provided in three pure color images with the silhouettes of the three speakers. When hovering them, they would become larger as the reaction and then provides little information about that speaker.(name, significance...) The information would disappear as the mouse leaves the button.

Each speaker would have three profile pages providing information about them as well as their works and videos related to them.

The final page of the profiles of each speaker would provide information about the speech
