Concept

Twenty-first century cities are faced with both environmental challenges and increasing demand for enhanced user experience within the urban landscape. This lecture series presents leaders in the fields of architecture, design and computer science, who are at the forefront of developing new technologies and infrastructure to respond to the growth of american cities.